THE WAR ENDED.

Hostile Sioux Returning From the Bad Lands.

They Will be at the Agencies in a Few Days.

This Decision Was Reached by the Indian Council.

Authorities Greatly Pleased With Their Latest News.

Big Foot's Escape.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—General Schofield has received a telegram from General Miles, dated Rapid City, December 24, as follows.

Colonel Sumner reported his command at Big Foot's camp on Cheyenne river, that Big Foot assured him he would do whatever he said and bring all his people to his (Sumner's) camp, but that he deceived him and eluded his command, going south in light order. This was most unfortunate just at this time, and turns the scale against the efforts that have been made to avoid an Indian war. Up to this time the prospects looked favorable, and in one week twenty four of the worst element have been removed.

The Indian Campaign.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—General Schofield this morning received the following telegram from General Miles, under date of Rapid City, S. D., December 25: "Have not heard from Colonel Carr for thirty six hours. He started to intercept Big Foot. Should he succeed or turn him to Cheyenne agency it will be favorable, as General Brooke reports a messenger from Little Wound, Big Road and Fast Thunder, who are the leaders of the Indians who went to the Bad Lands, who says that about half the Indians there are coming, and he thinks the rest will follow. Should this not be interrupted by some unforeseen event it will be the most desirable."

CHICAGO, December 26.—A special dispatch from Pine Ridge, S. D., says: The peace party failed, as was predicted. Five of the friendlies are in and report that the rest are on their way in. The enemy are described as crazy wild and wholly unmanageable. None have come over from the fighters. It was decided to at once subdue the warriors.

Cheyenne Scouts Attacked.

CAMP NEAR BATTLE CREEK, S. D., December 26.—The situation here remains practically unchanged. The weather is cold and the rivers frozen solid. A company of Cheyenne scouts is encamped at the mouth of Battle creek. Two attempts were made Wednesday by the hostiles, who number about eighty, to break into their camp. The first attack was made by only a few of the Indians, who were quickly repulsed with a loss of two killed and several wounded. Three of the Cheyenne Indian scouts were wounded, and it is thought one is fatally. The second attack was made after dark by what was supposed to be the whole band, who were led by Kicking Bear himself. Volley after volley was fired on both sides, and a desultory fire was kept up for an hour or more. It is not known how many of the hostiles were killed, but judging from the reports of one of the scouts there must have been several killed, as he says he heard several about in the Sioux language that they were hit. Troops were sent to the scene at an early hour yesterday morning and [illegible], at everything quiet and no hostiles in sight.

Rumors of Disaster.

OMAHA, December 26.—A special to the Bee from Pine Ridge says: There are rumors afloat here both to the effect that Sitting Bull's warriors have been captured, and also that they have escaped into the Bad Lands after vanquishing the soldiers sent out to intercept them. General Brooke, however, asserts there is no change in the situation and Big Foot's band of hostiles have not been captured so far as he knows.

Beginning of the End.

CHICAGO, December 26.—A special from Pine Ridge says that one battalion of the Seventh cavalry with two Hotchkiss guns and a pack train has just left for Wounded Knee, about thirty miles away.

The Indian council in the Bad lands decided in favor of the hostiles returning to the agency. They are now all on their way in. Perhaps fifteen or twenty may slip away, but the authorities feel that the Indian war has been ended. At least they express great satisfaction at the news brought in by the couriers who arrived about 2 o'clock. There is still danger of serious trouble in case any attempt is made to disarm the hostiles. Unless this is done, all the Indians will be at the agencies within three or four days.

Among the Railroads.

[Associated Press daily railroad special.]

CHICAGO, December 26.—An interesting question has been raised in connection with the recent ruling of Chairman Finley of the Western Passenger association to the effect that the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad is bound under the agreement to redeem all its tickets found in the hands of brokers. A short time ago the Rock Island people bought up all the Atchison mileage tickets they could find on the market. It was a big haul, aggregating over 99,000 miles of transportation. The purchasers insisted that they should be redeemed at the regular mileage rates by the company issuing them. The Atchison protested on the ground that many of the tickets, prior to the date of the purchase, had been bulletined by the company as having passed out of the possession of the parties to whom they were originally issued. Chairman Finley, however, decided that the bulletined tickets must be redeemed the same as the others. The Atchison was not satisfied and appealed to the association, which sustained the decision of the chairman. The Atchison then demanded that the question be settled by arbitration, but strong objection was raised to a second appeal. The agreement provides that when a road is not satisfied with the decision of the chairman it may appeal to the association or to arbitration. It does not provide that both courses may be tried, and Mr. Finley when called upon to interpret the clause decided that the action of the association settled the matter and by appealing to it the Atchison had forfeited the right to call in arbitration. Now the Atchison people have appealed from this decision. They take appeal from Finley's latest decision and will have it settled by a board of arbitrators. This is their privilege.

The ultimatum of the Lake Shore company that telegraph operators on the lines of that road must withdraw from the Order of Railway Telegraphers or leave the employ of the company is believed here to be the beginning of a general movement in that direction. No action has thus far been taken by the men as a result of the order, and the officials of the Lake Shore said to day no trouble was anticipated. It is understood many of the Chicago roads have had this matter under advisement for several months and will follow the example of the Lake Shore.

Counterfeiting Conspiracy Unearthed.

PITTSBURG, Pa., December 26.—A gigantic conspiracy to flood the United States with counterfeit silver dollars has been unearthed, and to the energy and intelligence of the officials of the First police district of Pittsburg is due the credit. Nineteen persons are already under arrest, and $1,100 in spurious coin is in the hands of the police. The money was brought from a central depot in New York city to Pittsburg by a gang of Italians employed to pass it. The money was all in silver dollars, and United States Detective McSweeney says it is the best counterfeit of the standard silver dollar that was ever made. The coin is perfectly formed in every detail, and its ring is identical with the good coin, the only fault about it being a little light of weight.

Two of the Italians, named Ello Darige and Nason Maggorins, accompanied by their wives, attempted to pass the spurious money over the bar of the Black Bear hotel, but were detected by the proprietor and arrested. The party at first refused to say where they lived, but the women finally broke down and told the police that they had been living at 523 Lincoln avenue, East end. The house was quietly surrounded and fifteen Italians arrested. Secreted under a bed in one of the rooms was found a pile of counterfeit money amounting to $1100. The prisoners were removed to the central station and locked up, after the house had been thoroughly searched.

The detectives interviewed the prisoners one at a time and succeeded finally in gaining the information that the money was made in New York and they had been sent here to dispose of it. Similar gangs were sent to other cities, but the men could not tell what particular cities were being operated on. Not a mould or die or any kind of counterfeiting machinery was found in the possession of the gang arrested here. Detective McSweeney has been after the New York gang of counterfeiters for a long time. While several arrests have been made from time to time and considerable of the counterfeit coin has been recovered the head of the organized band has not been uncovered.

PITTSBURG, December 26.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon the gang of counterfeit passers were given a hearing, and the two who appeared to be the principals were held for the court. They were both Italians, Mascellino and Marietta, the wife of the former also being held as a witness. Detective McSweeney of the United States service is in communication with New York officers, and expects to assist in unearthing the parent people in the east who have been manufacturing the clever imitation and shipping it for distribution.

One Year's Railway Building.

CHICAGO, December 26.—The forthcoming number of the Railway Age, of this city, will contain a statistical review of railway construction during 1890. Its estimate of the number of miles of new track laid places the figures at 6,080, with about 5200 added in 1889, a gain of 880 miles. Over 2000 miles of this year's increase are in the southern group of states and about 1600 miles of it in the northwestern group, in both of which sections railway building has been phenomenally active. The northwestern group shows 1047 miles of new track, a greater relative increase than in either of the other sections named; or more than 400 miles compared with the previous year's growth. This is largely owing to the active building operations of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads.

Jews in America.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—The division of the vital statistics of the census office has prepared a bulletin which is now in press containing a summary of the results of a special inquiry concerning the Jews in this country. The inquiry resulted in the return of 10,618 completed family schedules, embracing 60,630 living persons on the 31st day of December, 1889, and in these families there had been 2148 marriages, 6038 births and 2062 deaths during the five years ending that date. The social condition of the families is indicated to some extent by the number of servants kept by them, and as about two thirds are reported as keeping one or more servants the families reported may be said to be in easy circumstances.

England's Railroad Strike.

GLASGOW, December 26.—The railroad strike continues to keep business almost at a standstill and to cause inconvenience and annoyance to many thousands. The statement that the families of the strikers are beginning to feel the effects of the strike is denied by the men who are out. The latter claim they are in a position to hold out for at least six weeks without any way causing distress to their families or themselves.

The North British Railroad company is making strong efforts to secure the services of as many new hands as possible in order to keep up the fight against the strikers. So far the company has met with some success, and the result is that they have succeeded in bringing about a slight improvement in the traffic, which they keep moving along the lines.

Death from Electric Wire.

DENVER, December 26.—Charles McDonnell, a lineman employed by the electric light company, was instantly killed this evening by coming in contact with a live wire. He was working on the top of a pole near Fifteenth and Blake streets, and after receiving the shock he fell across the wires, his hand grasping the wire that killed him. In a moment a smell of burning flesh was distinguishable, and before he could be taken down it became stronger and a blue smoke arose from the burning flesh from three places on the poor fellow's body, producing a scene which caused the crowd to turn away with a shudder. McDonnell leaves a wife and family.

Fight at a Dance.

CHICAGO, December 26.—A special from Trenton, O., says: Edward Gallagher was shot through the heart, John Oliver was killed by a blow on the forehead with a stone, and Henry Ingalls was fatally wounded at a dance here last night. The trouble started over a woman and ended in a free general fight. Arrests were made.

A DISASTROUS STORM.

From Maine to Texas and Manitoba to Georgia.

Enveloped in Storms of Extraordinary Severity.

Railways Blocked and Business Generally Impeded.

New England Points Report Extreme Cold Weather.

An Extraordinary Storm.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—The storm that was yesterday morning in Louisiana moved to the Ohio valley during the day, and is this morning central on the North Carolina coast, causing general and heavy snowfalls in the middle Atlantic states, the Ohio valley and lower lake region. A second storm is central in northern Minnesota, which connected by a barometric trough with the North Carolina storm makes the general condition very unusual. Stormy and unsettled weather will prevail with heavy snows from the lake regions eastward.

NEW YORK, December 26.—The predicted snow storm arrived on schedule time, and this morning pedestrians are few and far between and the surface cars are making poor work of it in spite of the fact that four horses are now trying to do the usual work of two. Navigation on the river and in the bay is seriously interfered with, but so far no accidents have been reported. This storm, which is promised to be the worst since the blizzard of March, 1888, has been giving the south a taste of its quality since yesterday morning.

PITTSBURG, December 26.—Another big snow storm is raging here. It has been snowing steadily for 19 hours and there are no indications of its cessation. Between 12 and 14 inches of snow has already fallen. Trains on all roads are several hours behind time, and street car traffic on all but the cable roads has been temporarily suspended. The snow is dry and so far has not affected the telegraph service.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., December 26.—Snow began falling at midnight and at noon to day the storm is still raging fiercely with snow drifts of two or three feet in the streets. From the present indications the storm will continue through the day. The electric street railways and horse cars at this hour are unable to run any, traffic blocked on all sides. Trains on all the railroads are delayed and business is practically suspended throughout the Wyoming valley.

ST. LOUIS, December 26.—The heavy snow storm of Christmas day has caused some inconvenience to railroad travel, and trains on surrounding railroads are from one to four hours late. The snow is about a foot deep on the level. Reports from the interior of the state say there is from twelve to fifteen inches of snow. The weather is now clear and mild.

NEW YORK, December 26.—Reports received by the Associated press this afternoon show that nearly the whole country is enveloped in the storms, raging from Maine to Texas and from Manitoba to Georgia. From Norfolk south it is a rainstorm; from there north and north west a snowstorm. Northern New York seems to be about in the center of the disturbance. At 2 o'clock this afternoon the weather clerk was unable to give a reporter any encouragement. He said there was every indication that the two storms would meet to-night somewhere a little north of this city and that the general storm is rapidly developing into immense proportions. In conclusion, the clerk said: "There is every likelihood that the railways will be generally blocked north and west and that a serious, disastrous condition of things is to result from the storm."

ALBANY, N. Y., December 26.—Two sections of the roof of the New York Central railroad roundhouse at West Albany collapsed this afternoon under the weight of snow. Three men were injured.

NEW YORK, December 26.—To-day's storm on the water was much worse for navigation than the heaviest fog. Every thing in the line of steam craft was interrupted and the movement of vessels propelled by sail was suspended altogether.

A dispatch from Point Pleasant, N. J., says a heavy storm of blinding snow is raging along the entire coast from Sandy Hook to Cape May. [illegible] air is so thick with snow that it is difficult to look any distance out to sea. Telegraph and telephone wires are down and it is feared there are wrecks along the coast which have not yet been reported on this account. Superintendent Havens has ordered the entire life saving service along the coast to patrol their beaches and look for wrecks. The name of the schooner ashore on Dale beach is the Yale. She wants the assistance of the saving service. The sea is very high and fears are entertained for the vessel's safety.

Reports continue to be received from all parts of New York showing a heavy fall of snow and consequent interruption of traffic.

BANGOR, Maine, December 26.—At Bangor and vicinity this morning was the coldest of the season, the mercury ranging from 12 degrees below in Bangor to 35 degrees in the surrounding towns. The temperature is rising with indications of snow.

Damage by the Storm.

CINCINNATI, December 26.—A special to the Commercial Gazette from Lexington, Ky., says: The heaviest storm ever known here occurred yesterday afternoon and during the night. Shade trees and wires on the telegraph poles were broken and miles of wire are down. The fire alarm system was entirely ruined, many of the boxes being burned out. The Western Union telegraph wires are down, and not until six o'clock this morning did the city have any communication with the outside world. At this writing there is but one wire in operation between Lexington and Cincinnati. The electric car lines are badly damaged. It is thought that it will be days before the telephone service is restored to its usual condition. The loss will be about $100,000.

Ashore in the Storm.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., December 26.—The schooner Bill Stowe went ashore just north of here at noon. The life saving crew shot a line over the wreck and saved the crew of six in the breeches buoy.

The schooner A. H. Hurlburt of Gloucester went ashore three miles further north. Captain Thurston, Steward Hammond and Seaman Lawrence were [illegible] and drowned. The remainder of the crew were saved by life saving crews.

Swept by a Chinook.

MINNEAPOLIS, December 26.—The Journal's Pierre, S. D., special says: A [illegible] wind from the northwest [illegible]. It is the hardest [illegible] wind known in the Missouri valley for years.

It is reported here that last night a [illegible] the town of Bee Heights, east of here on the Northwestern railroad, but [illegible] are obtainable.

Extreme Cold.

[illegible], VT., December 26.—The thermometer registered 40 degrees below zero [illegible] and [illegible] degrees below this morning.

The Congressional Situation.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—The holiday season has affected the senate heavily in the matter of attendance and but seven senators put in an appearance at the north wing of the capitol to day. It was understood when the senate adjourned Wednesday that the session to morrow would be purely formal and in fact it was ordered only to escape the constitutional inhibition against an adjournment of over three days. Nothing can be done until Monday, and then the election bill will be taken up again. There is to be no cloture, no filibuster, nothing for the whole week to create a diversion from the debate on the elections bill.

A republican senator, a strong champion of the bill, said: "We will go on talking about the bill next week, and many speeches will be delivered to vacant seats and empty galleries. We cannot help it, you see, for the proceedings the other night when Hoar tried to drive the democrats into a night session, was proof conclusive that we could not muster in force during the holiday season. But I believe that about January 6 we shall have a fighting quorum, and then you may look for diversion."

The senator was asked if a majority could be secured for the cloture resolution. He replied that Senator Aldrich, who had it in charge, had been instructed to canvass the republican side of the senate before putting in the new rule. Senator Aldrich was a cool headed, shrewd man, and it was hardly to be presumed that he would enter into a great struggle as this promised to be without some sort of assurance of sufficient power behind him to win the victory.

A sergeant could barely secure enough members who were present in the house this morning to constitute a skirmishing squad. Here and there a few gentlemen would gather in a group, and in a desultory manner talk over the business now pending in the two houses. The consensus of opinion, especially on the democratic side, was that the debate on the shipping bill would be prolonged to a much greater extent than had been expected, many representatives on both sides of the house having signified their desire to deliver speeches upon that measure. Of course representatives are in the dark as to the action of the senate on the cloture, the financial measure and the elections bill. That the first will be adopted is considered as doubtful. As to the second the feeling on the republican side is that no financial bill can pass the house that is not a purely republican measure, one that is agreed upon in party caucus and one that is not put through the senate with the aid of democratic votes. That the prospect of the election bill is not very bright, unless the pending debate is brought to a speedy end, is admitted by all, a prospect which is deplored by the republicans and openly rejoiced in by the democrats.

Mass Meeting for Silver.

DENVER, December 26.—A mass meeting of the citizens of Denver was held at the chamber of commerce to take some action upon the silver question. About 1400 gentlemen attended and interesting addresses were made by several. The following resolutions were adopted.

WHEREAS, Actual trial has shown that the silver bill passed by congress last July does not at all fulfill the promises made by its framers, and that the fluctuations in the value of silver since its passage have worked serious injury to the business interests of the country.

WHEREAS, At the late election the people of the country declared in unmistakable terms in favor of a law securing the coinage of silver in United States mints upon the same terms and upon an equality with gold, at the ratio between gold and silver as now provided by law, and

WHEREAS, Upon the reassembling of congress its members recognized the propriety of further legislation in behalf of silver as money, and various measures have been proposed but none of which can possibly secure a sufficiency of sound money for the business of the country, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the board of trade and the chamber of commerce of the city of Denver, that it is the sense of this body that the only legislation that can bring relief to the business of the country is that which will give to it a currency sufficient in volume and of unassailable integrity, and that the most potent law to secure such results is one providing for the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

Resolved, That it is our firm belief that Colorado senators and representative in congress should use all their efforts in favor of and vote for a free coinage law, no matter with which political party such a measure may originate nor what any political congressional caucus may decree upon the subject; that the question of free coinage of silver is not a partisan one, as the masses of all political parties heartily favor its adoption.

Resolved, That the president of the board of trade and chamber of commerce in connection with four others to be appointed by the chair be requested to put themselves in communication with the commercial bodies of other cities, in the west, particularly in the mining states, that these localities may take prompt and effective steps to secure favorable action by their congressional representatives upon free coinage legislation.

The resolutions were signed by T. M. Patterson, J. C. McMichaels, Geo. F. Batchelder, H. M. Slater, T. B. Buckman and others.

A Block Burned.

VIROQUA, Wis., December 26.—The fire originating in the Lindemans building swept away the entire block of buildings, excepting the Tremont house, involving a loss of fully $150,000 with but $16,000 insurance. It was only by great exertions on the part of firemen and citizens that the remainder of the town was saved.

The general opinion in regard to the proposed removal of the Mormons to Mexico is that it is too good to be true

The eastern states are a safe place from which to discuss the Indian trouble and London is still safer. The people there too know less what they are talking about. It is therefore not surprising to know that a member of parliament condemns the killing of Sitting Bull

There is no need to discuss the question whether or no the ghost of Sitting Bull is wandering around the buttes of the Bad lands inviting the Indians to join in a real ghost dance. If the Indians think they see him the consequences will be quite as unpleasant

The navy department has received bids for a harbor defense ram of 2 050 tons displacement and a steel torpedo boat. The ram is the one authorized by the act of March 2 1890. She will have a speed of 17 knots and is intended solely for ramming purposes. The only projections above her armored deck are the conning tower, with 18 inches of armor the ventilators of the smoke pipes, and the hatch coamings. The torpedo boat is to bear a general resemblance to the Cushing and will have a required speed of 24 knots

The following words from the Salt Lake Tribune are taken from an editorial bearing especially on the case of Mormon immigration to Utah territory. They have, however, a wider application and may well be considered with a question that is becoming of more and more importance, the restriction of foreign immigration and naturalization

We say that this country needs to be more careful who it [illegible] than any other country, for the [illegible] citizen's papers are given this [illegible] from the slums of [illegible], his vote counts for just as much as does the vote of Grover Cleveland or James G Blaine. We would not restrict his coming, we would not if we could take from him any chance to better his condition, but we would guard the franchise of this country against such men as the [illegible] would make it impossible for [illegible] to lay their hands on the [illegible] ballot, and we would do it on the principle that our government is now forging guns and building battle ships on the principle that every nation has a right to be jealous of its sovereign power and suspicious of every man who will not give to it true and faithful allegiance

The pension attorneys since 1882 have received $37 000 000. This is three and seven tenths per cent of the total amount of pensions paid during that time. If the attorneys had really done anything during that time to earn this money there could be no objection made in reason to their receiving it. But their principal work is to simply transmit the papers sent them by the claimant to a government which is not only able and willing but anxious to give the old soldiers their just dues. The pension agents have done little good and much harm. It is probable that most of the frauds now being practised upon the government have been carried through by their help. If there is anything unwise and extravagant in the present pension laws, the responsibility must rest upon them in large measure. It is they who clamor the loudest for unreasonable and extravagant extensions of the law. It is they who stand in the way of needed reforms and have so far, by their great influence, been able to prevent the abolishment of the iniquitous fee system. It is to be hoped that the present consideration of the matter by congress will result in the extermination of this family of rats who have been papering their nest with ten dollar bills drawn in most cases under false pretenses and always unnecessarily from veterans and widows and orphans all over the country. The paid agents of the government can best perform this work. It is ridiculous extravagance to pay $37 000 000 for work which was hardly worth $37 000. It will be down right injustice if congress neglects to remedy an abuse to which its attention has been called

Among the speeches at the Reform club dinner Tuesday night was one by Governor Boies of Iowa. He made some remarkable statements regarding the condition of the farmers of the northwest. Perhaps it will be well to accept them with some reserve for Governor Boies knows that the strength of his party depends very largely on this kind of agitation. But it is to be expected that he would be fairly careful in his statements on such a notable occasion. He says Iowa is the leading corn state in the union, that fifty per cent of her male population is engaged in agricultural pursuits and less than three per cent are engaged in manufacturing enterprises of all kinds. The report of the commissioner of labor statistics shows that the cost of producing an acre of corn ready for market is eight dollars per acre. For five years the average product has been 33½ bushels and the price 22 cents per bushel. This gives $7 33 for the crop of an acre, or 67 cents less than the cost of producing it. He also states that the average price paid for farm labor is $18 50 a month, or less than is paid to those engaged in any other branch of industry. His inference is that the farming population of Iowa will be more and more every year for tariff reform. Certainly, if these facts are correct, it is likely to be that way. Had the McKinley [illegible] revised the tariff in the line of the wishes of the voters of the republican party, rather than in the line of the wishes of the manufacturers, the farmers would have continued republican without any question, and they may still continue republican provided a fair consideration is given to them in any arrangement of the tariff

Padlewski's Whereabouts

NEW YORK December 26.—The Sun says: If Padlewski the nihilist slayer of General Seliverskoff in Paris has taken refuge in this city he is not easily to be found here. It cannot be ascertained that he has made himself known to any of his fellow nihilists who have taken their abode among us. They profess to be in ignorance of his whereabouts and allege that they have no information of his having come to this country

PARIS December 26.—Colonel Pet[illegible]poff chief of the Russian [illegible] who is now in this city engaged in investigating the murder of General Seliverskoff to day made a statement to the effect that Padlewski the anarchist who is suspected of having killed the general has been traced to Brindisi [illegible] that point according to [illegible] Padlewski sailed for Verona [illegible] said to have subsequently taken refuge in Bulgaria the only country in which nihilists are now protected by the laws which prevent their extradition

Ordered from Canada

TORONTO Ont December 26.—There is much excitement in Canada over the affairs of the Northwestern Masonic Aid association whose headquarters are at Chicago. The organization has in force in Canada over $2 000 000 insurance among the Masons. It has been doing a purely Masonic business in Canada but it is coming to the knowledge of the Dominion government that the association was accepting non Masons as risks in the United States. It was notified to quit business in Canada or put up the statutory $5 000 000 deposit at Ottawa. The latter it would not do so it has been peremptorily ordered to withdraw from Canada. It is said that after the withdrawal from Canada the association can snap its fingers at the Canadian patrons who have paid in many thousands of dollars in assessments

Collision of Street Cars

PROVIDENCE R I December 26.—The heavy snow storm caused a bad accident on the Plainfield end of the Union rail way. The snow covered the track on a steep grade on that thoroughfare and when a car was coming towards the city at 11 o'clock the brakes failed to work and the horses started down the hill towards the city. Another car was just turning into the switch at the junction crossing and a collision could not be avoided. The conductor named Alexander Waterman, cut his horses loose. The horses on the westbound car were both ground under the wheels of Waterman's car and were instantly killed. Waterman was thrown from the car and his head split open. He was otherwise injured and there is little chance that he will live. Conductor Alfred of the westbound car had both his arms broken and was injured internally and will probably die. None of the passengers were injured

AMERICAN MAGAZINES

Their Extraordinary Improvement in Twenty-five Years.

Dead and Living Periodicals—Representative Monthlies.

Complete Novel Features—Letter From Junius Henri Browne.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The periodical literature of this country has improved probably more than any other one thing during the last quarter of a century. This is true particularly of the magazines proper or monthly illustrated publications, whose superiority is recognized abroad as well as at home. Europe has nothing to compare with our best specimens either in regard to pictures or letterpress, and does not pretend to have. Our wood engraving is confessedly unequaled, and our magazine contributors surpass those of the Old World in style, interest and variety. Our illustrated monthlies have a large circulation in Great Britain and a limited one on the Continent.

The republic has issued periodicals since early in the century, but most of them have been short lived, and very few of any special merit. The first magazine to attract and deserve general attention was The Knickerbocker, founded here by Charles Fenno Hoffman in 1833, and continued mainly by Lewis Gaylord Clark until 1860, leading a precarious, sickly life toward the close. Putnam's Monthly also appeared here, was of a high class including such contributors as Parke Godwin, George William Curtis, Richard Grant White and Fred S. Cozzens, who furnished to its pages some of their best work. It lasted four years—1853-57—and was revived after the war but was finally relinquished in '69 for business reasons.

The pioneer of the present magazines is Harper's, still called a new monthly, because perhaps, it is the oldest extant, its age being forty years. The progress of American magazines is shown in the marked difference between its early and recent numbers. The former were largely made up from the English periodicals and the illustrations were crude and elementary. The recent issues contain very little from English sources, unless advance sheets of a transatlantic novel. Until within a few years it did not print the names of authors with their articles except where those had high reputation. Anonymity has gone entirely out of fashion in periodicals. Many editors cannot be induced now to publish an unsigned paper of any kind, which may be an objectionable extreme. The letterpress of Harper's has advanced in the last decade nearly as much as the illustrations, the publishers being anxious to secure the best for their purpose in literature and art. They still aim to preserve the popular character of the monthly and continue to make a feature of articles of travel and of serial stories. The editors admit essays of an abstract or generic character and do not lean to poetry of the Browning school. Practical subjects in prose and verse are always preferred.

Their editorial departments intrusted to George William Curtis, William D. Howells and Charles Dudley Warner are always attractive. Their general editor is Henry M. Alden, who has been there twenty years, and is particularly competent to discharge the complicated duties of his position. Harper's circulation is enormous. I have heard it set down at 400,000, which may be an exaggeration. The firm does not brag or give big figures about this—it is not their habit or their policy—but they are ever on the alert to increase it, and are evidently satisfied with the result. They pay liberally for what they want, as high as $50 per thousand words occasionally higher. Their nominal rate is still I think $10 per thousand words, which they are very ready to increase if they have any reason. Among the living contributors are Edward Atkinson, Will Carleton, Moncure D. Conway, Rose Terry Cooke, C. P. Cranch, J. W. De Forest, Edgar Fawcett, Kate Field, Edward Everett Hale, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, John Hay, Joaquin Miller, Donald G. Mitchell, Louise Chandler Moulton, James Parton, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Richard H. Stoddard, Edmund C. Stedman, T. De Witt Talmage, John T. Trowbridge and William Winter.

The Atlantic was issued in 1857 as the representative of Boston mind and culture in that city, and was for years [illegible] of any periodical in the country. Longfellow, Emerson, C. C. Felton, Edwin P. Whipple, James Russell Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes, John Greenleaf Whittier and other literary lights of Massachusetts appeared almost exclusively in its pages. Lowell was the first editor, succeeded by James T. Fields, W. D. Howells and T. B. Aldrich, Horace E. Scudder now holding the place. The magazine has lost its supremacy, though still able and interesting and prides itself on appealing to the intellectual, not to lovers of the pictorial. Its circulation is not above 10,000, mostly in New England. Although said to be fairly remunerative to its publishers Houghton, Mifflin & Co. it does not aim to make much money. Its contributors, paid from $10 to $15 per thousand words, are less notable than they have been, necessarily, as it cannot offer the same pecuniary inducements as the New York illustrated periodicals. It is far more conservative than it was in the early days and some of the writers once favorites have lost their welcome. Many of the Harper contributors are to be found there at intervals. The continuation of The Atlantic proves what has been doubted—that a periodical may be sustained out of New York.

The Century, begun as Scribner's in 1870 by Charles Scribner, Dr. J. G. Holland and Roswell Smith, has become the rival of Harper's, though its circulation is thought to be less, [illegible] 200,000 [illegible] 300,000. Less popular in quality, it is unsurpassed in enterprise and liberality and contains some of the most striking and valuable papers in current literature. The sending of George Kennan through Russia and Siberia to determine by personal observation the wrongs of the czar's subjects from exile and imprisonment was a masterly stroke. It is said to have cost not far from $100,000, but the money was well invested. The Kennan articles have attracted universal attention and excited universal indignation. The "Life of Lincoln" by Hay and Nicolay and the war papers, despite the fact that they occupied a vast deal of space, largely increased the number of readers. Since the death of Scribner and Holland the magazine has been made a joint stock company in which the principal stock is [illegible]. Charles Scribner's sons, both young men, were thought to derive a disproportionate advantage from the title of the periodical, which was changed therefore to The Century, the Scribner interest being purchased at the same time.

In addition to the general magazinists Henry James, Frank R. Stockton, George W. Cable, Mark Twain, H. H. Boyesen, Brander Mathews, Charles De Kay, Maurice Thompson, Edith M. Thomas, Joel Chandler Harris, Constance F. Woolson, Henry E. Bunner, Edward Eggleston, Julian Hawthorne, James Whitcomb Riley, Bret Harte, Margaret J. Preston and Frances Hodgson Burnett are frequent contributors. Richard Watson Gilder is the editor and an excellent one. The Century's figures are as generous as those of Harper's, and as variable. The rivalry of the two periodicals has increased prices and elevated the quality of magazine work, both illustrations and letterpress. They cover a field that ordinarily a dozen or more monthlies would, and by this fact would seem to discourage similar enterprises. But really they do not. So many stories are told of the extraordinary profits of these two that new ventures of the same kind are stimulated. More than half a dozen magazines have been undertaken—most of them have failed—in consequence of their extraordinary success. Scribner's is one of the new magazines. The feeling of the young men in the house of Charles Scribner's Sons was that they had been unjustly crowded out of the older publication. Consequently they resolved to enter into competition with the older magazine as soon as the five years specified in the terms of the sale should pass. They tried to keep their purpose secret, but they could not, as their preparations were actively going on, and at the end of the sixth year being all ready they issued their magazine under favorable auspices. It is now three years old, and has a circulation it is said in excess of 100,000.

It is cheaper than The Century or Harper's, being sold at twenty five cents a copy, and is illustrated, though less elaborately than they. It has not interfered at all, I am told, with the success of The Century, nor does the extraordinary success of The Century interfere with it. The remarkable prosperity of one periodical seems to create a demand for more periodicals by increasing the public interest in them and the taste for reading them. Scribner's has introduced several attractions—a fresh lot of Thackeray's letters was one of these—and is generally an adroit caterer to its audience. Edward L. Burlingame, the editor, appears to be highly qualified for his place, which he fills and fits exactly. Scribner's figures for manuscript vary very little, if any, from those of the older city magazines, though they spend less on special features. A great many persons have thought that its entering the field against so formidable rivals was very rash, but its publishers say that they have far exceeded their anticipations. There has been no quarrel between The Century and Scribner's, but it is altogether probable that under the circumstances their love for one another is not illimitable.

The Cosmopolitan is another illustrated twenty five cent monthly which [illegible]. It was started at Rochester in this state five years ago and removed hither, the publishers afterward failing. Since then it has passed through several hands and is now owned and edited by John Brisben Walker, reputed to be wealthy, having made much money at Denver, Colo., in real estate. It publishes in each issue a complete novel, which occupies most of its space and is said to be a taking feature. Its usual rate for contributions is $10 to $15 per thousand words.

A still newer magazine, not illustrated, is Belford's, three years old, Robert Belford editor, having a circulation, it is said, of 25,000, largely in the south. Many of its writers are new to the public, but they choose readable subjects and treat them well. A long story appears in each number and is supposed to constitute its chief attraction.

Lippincott's, published by the J. B. Lippincott company, Philadelphia, [illegible] five years since, and its success has induced other monthlies to adopt it. Its contributors are many of them New Yorkers, with a considerable local reputation, and they are paid liberally, as prices for literature go. The magazine, not illustrated, is twenty two years old, and its actual circulation is set down at 35,000 to 40,000. Its present editor and manager is J. M. Stoddart, to whom its recent large increase is ascribed. Most of its novels are by Julian Hawthorne, Edgar Fawcett, Edgar Saltus, Amelie Rives, Maud Howe, William Henry Bishop, H. H. Boyesen, John Habberton, Charles Bernard, Sidney Luska and other New Yorkers.

These are the principal magazines of national fame, though there are five times as many of local repute, a number of them firmly established. I do not mention The North American, The Forum and the new Arena, of Boston, for they, being reviews, have nothing in common with the magazines, nearly every one of which is issued by a publishing firm. While these pay better than books do, no one can begin to live by writing for them, or, indeed, by doing any kind of pure literary work.

Notes from New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 2[illegible].—The mistresses of a thousand homes in New York city are at their wits ends in the matter of servant girls. They are obliged to choose between insolence, incompetence and exorbitant wages. Even the exorbitant wages are apt to fail because of the short supply of competent girls. The situation is so bad that [illegible] girls who have had only a month or two of experience in a small family do not hesitate to leave a good mistress without warning [illegible] they [illegible] employment elsewhere with [illegible] the loss of a day. If a thousand of the intelligent young women who lead a miserable existence in shops would turn their talent to account as housekeepers they would find their efforts better appreciated [illegible] before, could live comfortably without sacrificing their self respect, and could save money.

In New York the hotel still reigns supreme. The flat still thrusts itself upon the sight everywhere, but it is rapidly losing ground in favor of the hotel. The most modern apartment house is in fact a family hotel. The genealogy of the apartment house hotel is after this fashion: First there were houses, and people who did not have a house of their own boarded with some one who did; then to accommodate people who didn't want to board and who would not be bothered with the care of a large establishment some long headed person invented the flat. And when people began to tire of the inconvenience of cooking, washing and ironing in small quarters some genius evolved the [illegible] house [illegible] a complete house with [illegible] the kitchen [illegible] kitchen serving for all the occupants. This might be called the [illegible] domesticity. You have [illegible] too much [illegible] if you want to [illegible] of the earth [illegible] lock the hall door [illegible] key to the janitor and start.

THE LITERARY WORLD.

E. J. Edwards Tells of Two New England Women Writers.

[illegible] Sarah Orne Jewett and Mary Wilkins.

[illegible] for More Than They Have Time to Write.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Two young women born and bred within a hundred miles of Boston are being a good deal talked about in literary circles. One of these is Miss Sarah Orne Jewett, and the other is Miss Mary Wilkins. Miss Jewett's name has been a familiar one to magazine readers for a number of years, but it is only within a few months that Miss Wilkins has achieved notoriety. The popularity which these women have secured is due to causes which in some respects are identical and in others entirely different. Miss Jewett's literary growth has been rather slow, and at one time there was a suspicion that it was being forced by the cult which regards The Atlantic Monthly as gospel.

Miss Wilkins leaped into a sudden popularity after some years of vain effort to attain recognition, and Boston is now doing with her what is usually done with those who leap at a bound into popular favor. Having wearied of the Browning fad, and the [illegible] fad being a momentary delusion, while the Rudyard Kipling fad failed to take any root at all, of a sudden Boston discovered Miss Wilkins, and is now making a fad of her and her writings. Somebody told her a few days ago that they were making a fad of her, and it annoyed her greatly. "I hope not," she said, "for I do not want to have the experience which Ibsen and Browning have had with the fad makers."

Miss Wilkins is younger than Miss Jewett, but whether she is to be regarded prettier or not depends upon individual opinions regarding feminine beauty. She is a pretty faced, bright eyed woman, possessed of the keenest sense of humor, and of a constant disposition to gratify it. She was bred in a village a few miles away from Boston, and yet far enough away to preserve without contamination with city manners the quaint and individual characteristics to be found in a New England country village. From her earliest childhood Miss Wilkins found the greatest delight in associating with the odd and original persons whom she met, and it is from these early experiences that she is now drawing her material for her inimitable sketches. She began to write in a timid sort of way a few years ago. Her sketches were very short, not running over a column and a half of ordinary newspaper matter, and they were printed with small profit, no fame, and with hardly any other satisfaction to her than her own delight at seeing her compositions in print.

All the sketches had some little plot to turn upon, but the plot was secondary and the value of the sketches was in their photographic and yet romantic delineation of the odd characters she knew. Humor and pathos were combined in them, and at first literary judges, noticing these stories, printed here and there were struck with their wonderful fidelity, remarkable realism, and yet with the charm of romance which revealed literary grace and the subtle favor which makes a sketch from nature a delight. At last they found out who the writer was, and in a day almost Miss Wilkins found herself a favorite of the public. Of course the usual result followed. The long lane was turned, and with fame is coming fortune, for she has all that she can do, and could do much more for large prices if she had time and strength.

Miss Jewett would probably have always remained a sort of idol of the exclusive cult of Boston had she continued to confine her work to publication in exclusive periodicals. But for the last year or two she seems to have realized that there is a [illegible] world than that living on the shores of Massachusetts bay, and she has written for it. The result proves the soundness of her judgment, for she is becoming widely known, and is finding a market at high prices for all that she can write. Her writings have not the broad, aggressive humor that is to be found in Miss Wilkins' sketches, and she sometimes makes the mistake of attempting the analytical. That, however, was a fault of her earlier days, and she has learned of late that the charm of a story is to be found in the story itself, and not in the fine writing of the author or the manifest skill with which the literary dissecting knife is used. Her stories are longer, too, than Miss Wilkins', although she is to be classed with the short story writers.

Miss Jewett is the daughter of a country doctor, born and brought up within sight of the sea as it makes up near the Isle of Shoals. The impressions of her childhood, obtained by contact with seafaring people and the salty flavored persons who make a humble living on the Maine coast, are the great store house from which she now draws for her stories. The scent of salt air, of summer seas and winter tempests is in her stories, and she has been able to convey in them some sense of the pathos and solemnity which accompany lone dwelling by the ocean's side.

There is a difference of opinion between those who have seen Miss Jewett respecting her personal appearance. Some regard hers as the most interesting and remarkable type of intellectual beauty of countenance to be found anywhere; others regard her as an attractive woman, but not beautiful and scarcely pretty, but all admit, however, a charm of personality which can hardly be expressed in words. E. J. EDWARDS.

THE WORLD'S FAIR OF 1893.

[illegible] Progress of Arrangements With Foreign Nations.

[Special Correspondence.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—With the issue of President Harrison's proclamation inviting the nations of the earth to be represented in Chicago, the World's Columbian exposition assumes for the first time in an official way an international phase. Not that the people of a greater portion of the world are already advised of the fact that the United States is preparing a world's fair. [illegible] Atlantic cable, flashing its daily budget of information from the shores of Columbia to those of Albion; the tons of newspapers and other periodical literature that are weekly carried from New York by the ocean steamships to be distributed far and wide, and the personal advocacy of tens of thousands of Americans who during the past summer have overrun the continental Europe, [illegible] part and parcel of one [illegible] New York in behalf of the undertaking in which the United States in general and Chicago in particular are so deeply interested. This kind of propaganda, however, while it is good enough for the common people, carries no official weight. Governments are not run by gossip. There are certain forms and certain conditions which must be complied with before the powers that be can indicate any official recognition of the nation's desires.

Official communication having thus been established, the department of foreign affairs of the exposition is in a position to go forward with its programme. This includes the addressing of communications to every representative of the United States in diplomatic service abroad, from ministers plenipotentiary to vice consuls, giving them complete information regarding what has been done and what remains to be done, and the printing in five languages and their distribution abroad of the rules and regulations already adopted. Secretary Blaine, moreover, can proceed to enlist the entire force of the state department in the work, while Moses P. Handy, whose appointment as chief of the bureau of promotion and publicity has been received with general approval from all parts of the country, may enter upon his duties by correcting the somewhat erroneous impressions that prevail abroad concerning the lack of progress made by the exposition by giving the leading journals of Europe and South America a correct account of the present situation, and a statement of the advantages to be gained by liberal displays of the products of their respective countries.

The board of lady managers, too, proposes to make its influence felt in the foreign field, and among its suggestions that have been received with especial favor is one for the establishment of honorary boards of ladies throughout Europe in order to stimulate public interest among the gentler sex. No less a personage than the Princess of Wales is to be invited to preside over the ladies' board of Great Britain.

Growing out of the publication in this country of some of the plans which have practically been adopted for the occupancy of Jackson park, there has been a good deal of inquiry relative to the uses to which the Lake Front—that vast expanse of land running from Harrison to Randolph streets, and fringed on the one side by Michigan avenue with its Auditorium hotel, Richelieu, Leland, Art institute and other noted structures, and on the other by the tracks of the Illinois Central, with Lake Michigan beyond—is to be put. Nothing definite on this subject can be properly said for some time to come.

To quote one of the prominent officials of the directory, and whose opinions were expressly asked for this correspondence: "The uncertainties involved in the legal aspect have prevented progressive action by the directory, and until some settlement is reached between the Illinois Central, the Michigan avenue property owners and a special committee of the board no one can tell what structures can be erected on the Lake Front."

It is a question, however, whether this view of the situation, while intended to be conservative, does not verge toward the pessimistic. At all events, there may be no doubt that an agreement will be reached between the apparently conflicting interests which will enable the city entrance to the fair to compare favorably with the magnitude and grandeur beyond. One scheme which has been approved by the joint committee of the property owners, the directory and the city council contemplates a new right of way for the rail roads 300 feet wide and adjoining the present right of way. The tracks are to be lowered to a depth that will permit them to be covered and become a part of the park, and to be reached by stations built after a style that would make them permanent ornaments to the locality. This scheme would allow the World's fair directors to occupy as much ground as they used outside of the new right of way, to make a park of the approach to the buildings, and to locate a magnificent art palace on the present made ground within a stone's throw of the Auditorium.

The whole matter now rests in the hands of the Illinois Central. That corporation must make a definite proposition, upon which the city council and state legislature will pass. Whatever may be agreed upon by these two bodies will be satisfactory to the directory and the property owners. Meanwhile the delay is not by any means dangerous, for, as President Palmer intimated to President Harrison at their recent interview, the general arrangements are far in advance of the conditions which prevailed two and a half years prior to the opening of the Philadelphia Centennial. HENRY M. HUNT.

On a New York "L" Train.

Three men boarded a downtown elevated train at One Hundred and Sixteenth street the other day. From their conversation it could be gathered that one was a resident of New York city, one a visitor from a small middle state town, and the other a Colorado ranchman. At Fifty-ninth street a dozen or more boys and girls entered the car with school-books under their arms. Two of the girls and four of the boys wore spectacles.

"It seems to me," said the man from the small town, "that there is hardly a sound pair of eyes in the city. Nearly everybody wears spectacles, young and old. In my town only the grandfathers and grandmothers have poor eyesight."

"You never see a pair of spectacles on the plains," said the ranchman. "Men of 60 and 70 out there have as good sight as the boys, sometimes better. I think the reason must be that they have use for their eyes out there. Here, unless you look straight up into the sky, you are always staring at a brick wall. It hurts my eyes. I should go blind here."

"You are right," said the New York man, who happened to be a physician. "City eyes have no chance. They need exercise—just such exercise as those of a [illegible]."

Poor Mrs. Vanderbilt.

New Yorkers are getting to be the most inveterate and [illegible] starers. I once saw Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, a sweet faced and rather pretty woman, come into Stearn's to do some shopping. The women about heard who she was and they stood around her in a circle and simply feasted their eyes upon every detail of her dress and appearance. They kindly called each other's attention to her earrings, solitaire pearls—to the set of her dress and the way it [illegible] back. They came closer [illegible] They studied the way she had her hair done up and suggested that it was worth trying when they [illegible] shoulder to shoulder with her [illegible] her hat by heart. She [illegible] through it all, pretended she did not see or hear or feel, finally turned around to go, with a blankly absent expression, the cortege thronging around her and escorting her, still loudly commenting, to her carriage.—Cor. San Francisco Argonaut.

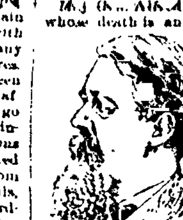

One Wife's Thanksgiving.

"I have lost [illegible] in the recent slump in stocks," said a New Yorker whose home life has been unexceptionable as his modest public career has been above reproach, "and I am practically left without capital at all. I have to begin the world again at [illegible] better off than when I started at 21. For a long time I hesitated about breaking the news of my financial ruin to my wife. This is the plan I hit on: I took her to dinner at Delmonico's, the night before Thanksgiving. Then I took her to the theatre. Our Thanksgiving dinner was a dainty one, and when it was over and I looked around at the dining room I am unable longer to use, and at the dear home I shall have to move out of, it cost me a struggle, but I told her all. If I had any doubts as to how she would receive the news they were at once dissipated. Some wives are worth many fortunes."—New York World.

HIS BATTLES NOW ARE O'ER.

The Record of the Late Maj. Gen. Terry as a Soldier.

Maj. Gen. Alfred Howe Terry (retired), whose death is announced, will doubtless go into history as the true "Hero of Fort Fisher." When the first attempt to capture that stronghold had failed, and the usual despondency resulted, Gen. Grant quietly resolved, as he says, to select a commander of great experience and quick intelligence to try it again. His choice fell on Gen. Terry, and the relation of how the work was [illegible] among the brightest chapters of American history. The subsequent dispute as to precedence in date of commission is not make such pleasant reading, but in the end justice was done.

It adds not a little to the brilliancy of Gen. Terry's achievement that he was a [illegible], as generally supposed, with very little military knowledge. Yet he was a natural soldier, volunteered under the first call and rose rapidly in rank. He was born Nov. 14, 1827, at Hartford, Conn., and [illegible] New Haven and graduated from the Yale law school. In the [illegible] he served some time as colonel of the Second Connecticut infantry; he led it to the front, and it did heroic work at Bull Run. In September, 1861, he became colonel of the Seventh Connecticut, and with it bore an honorable part in the operations on the South Carolina coast.

In April, 1862, he was made brigadier general of volunteers, and for over two years longer served on the coast. Aug. 26, 1864, he was [illegible] general, and after [illegible] events elsewhere two [illegible] on Jan. 15, 1865. One made [illegible] in the regular army the other a provisional major general of volunteers. On March 3, 1866, President Cleveland gave him army rank next to that of Hancock.

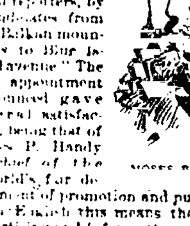

Late in 1864 Gen. Terry's command was transferred to the Army of the Potomac and bore an active part to the close. His subsequent career as an Indian fighter is well known. He died at the residence of his sister in New Haven.

A New Opera by Verdi.

It recently became known that Verdi, the celebrated composer of "Aida," has in his old age undertaken a task that will either add to his fame or emphasize the close of his career. Of this event, important to every lover of music, an Italian correspondent writes that not a soul, with the exception of Boito, the author of the libretto, and Mme. Verdi, knew that the great maestro was composing a new opera. In order to avoid all suspicion Verdi, who has always written his operas on a special paper provided for him by the musical publisher Ricordi, has been writing his spartito on common music paper bought here and there. A few days ago Verdi, who was in Milan and was staying at the Hotel Milan, had invited to dinner Boito, Signor Ricordi, his wife and daughter. Verdi was in very good humor and told lots of amusing stories. Toward the end of the dinner Boito raised his champagne glass and exclaimed: "To the health of 'Falstaff.'" Of course none of the guests understood the meaning of the toast. Mme. Ricordi was the first to guess what it meant, and before dinner was over Verdi had let out the secret. The part of Falstaff is written for a baritone; the personages of the opera are very numerous, but the choruses few.

Made a World's Fair Official.

Director General Davis has entered on the work of organizing his corps of officials for the World's fair of '93, and as soon as it was announced that he was ready to appoint, his office in Chicago was besieged, in the language of the local reporters, by "candidates from the Balkan mountains to Blue Island avenue." The first appointment announced gave general satisfaction, being that of Moses P. Handy as chief of the "World's fair department of promotion and publicity." In plain English this means the newspaper advertising and information work.

MOSES P. HANDY.

Moses P. Handy is a Virginian of 46 years, who has been in newspaper work continuously since he laid down the musket at the close of "the unpleasantness." He has served in every department from reporter and correspondent to editor and manager. He is also a magazine writer and has done some foreign travel and luxuriating in the capitals of Europe. He has for several years been president of the noted Clover club of Philadelphia, and is as pleasant at the social board as he is facile with the pen. As a Philadelphian he served as national commissioner for the [illegible] experience therefrom being a valuable [illegible] his other qualifications.

The Next Congress.

Political experts who have made a study of the membership of the Fifty-second congress declare that it should be classed thus: Farmers' Alliance 40, Republicans 87, Democrats 206. The Alliance leaders, however, claim 60 members, and assert that others are pledged to sustain their views.
